ABSTRACT

Sources of information for environmental involvement are presented in this bibliography, designed not only as a single reference work but also to demonstrate the variety of sources which exist. Catalogued are organizations, institutions, agencies, and groups concerned with environmental affairs and providing international, continental, national, regional, state, and local coverage. Arrangement of entries is alphabetical by author, issuing agency, or title, depending upon which is most appropriate or useful. No subject arrangement or indexing is provided. One hundred thirteen sources are listed. (BL)

PREFATORY NOTE

The purpose in compiling this list was not only to provide a single reference opus indicating sources of environmental involvement information, but also to demonstrate the variety of sources which exist. This was done so that persons without research training, who might be unfamiliar with standard directories and lists, would not suffer a blind spot by missing these often useful sources which are commonly found in library reference collections.

Some items (e.g., Mordy and Sholtys, Yell-o Pages) are specialized directories. Some (e.g., Berland, LaFollette) are simply lists included in the texts of, or as appendixes to, larger works. Some (e.g., Wilson, Boswell) give a narrative account of the organizations' activities. Others are general reference works which either provide a subject approach (e.g., College Blue Book, Research Centers Directory) or are merely helpful to consult (e.g., Congressional Directory, U.S. Government Organization Manual).

Included in this listing are sources providing international, continental, national, regional, state, and local coverage. The latter are more difficult to identify, and quite a few may have been omitted unintentionally. The primary focus is on U.S. coverage and, unless a title or entry note indicates otherwise, this emphasis may be assumed. Some dated and/or out-of-print or otherwise unavailable items have been included to reflect what has been done. They may be available for consultation in libraries, research centers, environmental organizations' offices, etc.

There is a strong bias toward including information on conservation and natural environment-related groups. Population and urban problems, for example, are given little attention.

If unsure about items offered for sale, it is suggested that the publisher be contacted first for additional information, if an examination copy is not available.

It is hoped that any sources which were excluded will be brought to the compiler's attention for possible inclusion in an addendum. Corrections and updating are also in order. Please include complete information.

Arrangement of entries is alphabetical by author, issuing agency, or title, depending upon which was felt to be more appropriate or useful. No subject arrangement or indexing is provided.

Special thanks are due Emily Earley and Priscilla Whitmore, without whose generous help and advice this list would not have been as comprehensive or useful.

A donation of 25¢ is requested in order to help defray compilation, printing and distribution costs. Thank you.
